

SPORTS MEDICINE COMMUNITY OUTREACH

Purpose

The OSU Sports Medicine Outreach Program brings sports medicine to the community. It is a multidisciplinary team of physicians, athletic trainers, physical therapists, sport psychologists, nutritionists, sports performance coaches and other health professionals.

Impact

Over 5,000 local competitors and performers benefit from our on-site care provided to a wide variety of community partners, most notably Columbus City Schools. We promote overall health and well-being via educational programming on physical fitness, the treatment and prevention of injuries and related sports and exercise subject matter.

On-site care includes injury evaluation, injury treatment/management, injury prevention and sports performance. We foster the university's spirit of collaboration through student mentoring and teaching, as well as by inclusion of our resident physicians and sports medicine fellows.
